A brand new interface highlights their Center for Law Enforcement and Intelligence

(Garden City, New York) October 24, 2011 – The Nassau County Police Department (NCPD) Foundation, a non-profit public-private partnership aimed at raising funds to build a state-of-the-art police academy and intelligence center in Nassau County, today re-launched their website (www.ncpdfoundation.org) to provide more robust information about their mission and the progress of it.

The Nassau County Police Department Foundation website is designed and hosted by Paul Jann Advertising, Inc., a New York Marketing, Advertising, and Multi-Media Agency based in Nassau County, Long Island. The website features a vibrant and easy-to-navigate interface describing the NCPD Foundation's mission to raise the funds necessary to build the Center for Law Enforcement and Intelligence. The detailed renderings and video fly through of the Center will give viewers a vivid idea of how the building will look inside and out.

“The new website is redesigned to provide members of the community with a portal to learn more about this important project and how it will benefit the community” says Robert Codignotto, Co-Chairman of the NCPD Foundation. “The new site is an important tool allowing us to effectively communicate the Foundation's mission and our plans for the Center.”

Rich with content, the site was enhanced to serve as a comprehensive resource for those who wish to learn more about the NCPD Foundation's mission and goals. With a goal of raising $25 million in private donations the Foundation has garnered approximately $4 million to date. A link to Guidestar will allow viewers to see all of the Foundation's most up-to-date financial documents. Further, those interested in supporting the NCPD Foundation will be able to make a secure donation through a PayPal donation portal.
